

A close-up photograph of two white calla lily flowers. The flowers are the central focus, with their characteristic spathe shape clearly visible. They are set against a dark, blurred green background, likely the foliage of the plant. The lighting is soft, highlighting the texture of the petals.

Some of us are called to care
for other caregivers.
If we don't, who will?

The Thoughtful Caregiver